3.3: Communication process

Interaction between people is cyclic, which means that what one person says and does evokes a reaction from the other person, and this reaction again stimulates another reaction from the first person [10, 11]. Three things are needed for successful communication. They are:

1. A sender;
2. A clear message; and
3. A receiver [12].